

Executive Summary

Pathminder:

We are currently working to align our active meetings with Pathminder, appreciating SRI's efforts in negotiating reduced costs. Our goal is to grow to 600 meetings in the next 12 months, for which we propose a tiered pricing model to incentivise this growth and maintain cost efficiency. This strategy aims to strengthen our partnership with Pathminder and support mutual growth and sustainability.

Hubspot:

The increase in Hubspot users to 21 licences requires us to reassess our pricing quotes. We are working on securing updated pricing and appreciate the ongoing negotiation efforts of SRI.

Facilitator Portal:

The portal is critical to SRAU's strategic goals, particularly achieving 1000 meetings. Despite user and tool usage growth, the active user count has stagnated, likely due to insufficient engaging content. We highlight the need for dynamic content to increase engagement and note that the current V2 priorities do not align with our goals. We provided facilitator feedback to guide necessary improvements.

Lift and Shift Position:

We have limited desire to pursue a lift and shift due to several operational challenges, including service provider engagement, migration work, organisational morale, and reputational risks. However, SRAU and SRG's misaligned priorities and the lack of responsiveness to SRAU necessitate exploring other solutions to support our community better if our V2 requests are not guaranteed within the next 6 months.

Operational Challenges:

Transitioning to a new service provider would require significant administrative resources, technical and project management efforts, and could impact organisational morale and pose reputational risks.

Strategic Alignment and Collaboration:

We are committed to the Global Digital Project. We prefer to collaborate with SRI to enhance the portal, leveraging existing relationships and infrastructure to maximise our investments and achieve strategic goals without incurring additional costs and disruptions from a platform migration.

Costs:

SRAU should not bear the $30K cost for Yarmer's lift and shift, as they are an SRI service provider. We remain committed to partnering with SRI to develop the portal further.

Recommendation:

We advocate for a collaborative enhancement approach with SRI over a lift-and-shift strategy to deliver value while aligning with our strategic objectives. However, due to the lack of responsiveness to feedback, we recommend exploring alternative solutions to ensure the portal aligns with our strategic goals and supports our users effectively.

Pathminder

We currently have 232 meetings in Pathminder but 349 active meetings with the team working hard to get all of these meetings into Pathminder. We appreciate the efforts of SRI in negotiating a reduced Pathminder cost. Our goal is to grow to 600 meetings in the next 12 months or a total cost of $36,000 at the current price point. It would be great to see some incentives for more meetings with a reduced price point. Perhaps a range could be negotiated for the following:

- Up to 200 Meetings $5 per meeting $12K
- Over 200 meetings up to 500 meetings $4 per meeting $24K
- 500 meetings up to 1000 meetings $3 per meeting $36K

This tiered pricing model would provide incentives for us to expand our meeting offerings while maintaining cost efficiency. It would also strengthen our partnership with Pathminder by demonstrating a commitment to mutual growth and sustainability.

We believe this approach is financially reasonable and would greatly assist us in achieving our strategic goals. We would appreciate the opportunity to discuss this proposal further and explore how we can implement this tiered pricing structure.

Thank you for your consideration and continued support.

Hubspot

We have 21 licensed users in Hubspot now and our earlier quote was based on far less licences. We will come back to you with what we have been able to secure for comparison. Appreciate your hard work on negotiating this.

Portal

The Portal is critical to SRAU's 1000 meeting strategic target and a key feature of our Membership Model.

While the number of users and tool usage through the portal are steadily growing, there are a number of concerns we have with the roadmap. The number of active users has remained relatively the same since January 24, with a limited number of growth, and we suspect a large portion of this is just those that first gain access to the portal after training and are not enticed to return due to the lack of engaging or changing content. According to Yarmer, active engagement is defined as one login per month.

We have now received data for more than one login:

Active Users: 114 Monthly Active Users

Count Users With Two Or More Sessions Per Month: 96 or 19%

Count User With Four Or More Sessions Per Month: 36 or 7%

Without dynamic and engaging content within the portal, we believe that this number will see very little growth continuing as we currently are. The V2 priorities that were developed between SRAU and Yarmer to address this are not at all reflected in the 'Looking forward' section of the document. We fail to see how the three priorities listed would contribute to SRAUs current desires and goals for the portal.

Lift and Shift Position

SRAU have very little appetite or desire to lift and shift the platform due to the high costs (on top of the financial cost would be the engagement of a new service provider, months of migration work, organisational morale and fatigue, and the potential reputational risks associated. We are committed to the Global Digital Project and working together.

However, at present we do not believe that SRAU and SRG's priorities or pace of delivery are aligned. The current priorities outlined by SRI for the remainder of the year will not achieve any of our growth or strategic goals for the portal and with no guarantee that our V2 requests will even be considered next runs the risk of the portal becoming an organisational burden rather than an asset.

Due to this, I believe it is in SRAU's best interest to begin to explore alternative solutions that would better support our facilitators, community, and participants if we can not have a guarantee of the features we need delivered in the next 6 months.

Operational Challenges:

- Service Provider Engagement: Transitioning to a new service provider involves extensive engagement, including vendor selection, contract negotiations, and establishing new working relationships. This process is time-consuming and requires significant administrative resources.
- Migration Work: The actual process of migrating the platform involves months of work to transfer data, reconfigure systems, and ensure continuity of service. This migration effort demands substantial technical and project management resources, which could otherwise be directed towards ongoing development and improvements.
- Organisational Morale and Fatigue: The disruption caused by a lift and shift can impact organisational morale. Staff may experience fatigue due to the additional workload and uncertainty during the transition period. Maintaining high levels of engagement and productivity during such a transition is challenging.
- Reputational Risks: Any issues arising during the migration process, such as data loss or service interruptions, could pose reputational risks to SRAU. Ensuring a seamless transition is critical to maintaining trust and credibility with our facilitators, participants, and stakeholders.

Strategic Alignment and Collaboration

- Focus on Partnership: We remain committed to working in partnership with SRI to build on the great potential of the portal. Collaborating with SRI allows us to leverage existing relationships and infrastructure, facilitating a more streamlined and cost-effective approach to achieving our strategic goals.
- Maximising Existing Investments: By continuing to develop the portal with SRI we can maximise the return on our existing investments. This approach ensures that we build upon the current foundation, rather than incurring additional costs and disruptions associated with a platform migration.

We remain committed to partnering with SRI to build on the portal's potential. This collaboration allows us to leverage existing relationships and infrastructure, facilitating a more streamlined and cost-effective approach to achieving our strategic goals. By continuing to develop the portal with SRI, we can maximise our existing investments rather than incurring additional costs and disruptions associated with a platform migration.

We believe it is strategically necessary to explore other options that better support our facilitators, community, and participants. If we cannot secure a guarantee for the delivery of necessary features within the next 12 months, we must consider alternative solutions.

Costs

We do not believe SRAU should be responsible for Yarmer costs of 30K for the lift and shift as they are a SRI service provider and any decision to lift and shift would come at considerable additional cost to SRAU due to SRI/SRG change in strategic direction. It would be good to understand what these costs involve and how we might work together to reduce them.

Recommendation:

We strongly advocate for a collaborative approach with SRI to enhance the portal rather than pursuing a costly and disruptive lift-and-shift strategy. This will allow us to focus our resources on delivering value to our facilitators, community, and participants while aligning with our strategic objectives for growth and sustainability.

However, given the lack of responsiveness to feedback, SRAU should consider alternative solutions that better support our facilitators, community, and participants. We recommend exploring other options to ensure the portal aligns with our strategic goals and provides the necessary support for our users.

By implementing these recommendations, SRAU can achieve its strategic goals cost-effectively, focusing resources on delivering value and fostering sustainable growth.
